

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF NEVADA

* * *

LN MANAGEMENT LLC SERIES 2543
CITRUS GARDEN.,

Plaintiff,

v.

FEDERAL NATIONAL MORTGAGE
ASSOCIATION,

Defendant.

and

FEDERAL HOUSING FINANCE
AGENCY

Intervenor.

Case No. 2:15-cv-00112-MMD-CWH

ORDER

I. SUMMARY AND BACKGROUND

This case comes before the Court through Defendant Federal National Mortgage Association’s (“Fannie Mae”) petition for removal. (ECF No. 1.) Plaintiff LN Management, LLC Series 2543 Citrus Garden (“LN Management”) filed this action on January 20, 2014, in the Eight Judicial District Court in Clark County, Nevada, to quiet title to certain real property located at 2543 Citrus Garden Circle (“the Property”) in Henderson, Nevada. Fannie Mae removed the action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331, citing to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals’ decision in Lightfoot v. Cendant Mortgage Corp., 769 F.3d 681, 683 (9th Cir. 2014), where the court construed the “sue and be sued” clause in Fannie Mae’s federal charter as a basis for conferring federal question jurisdiction. (ECF No. 1 at 2.)

1 In a decision issued on January 18, 2017, the Supreme Court overturned the 2 Ninth Circuit, holding that Fannie Mae's authority "to sue and to be sued, and to
3 complain and to defend in any court of competent jurisdiction, State or Federal," 12
4 U.S.C. § 1723a(a), does not confer federal jurisdiction over all cases involving Fannie
5 Mae. Lightfoot v. Cendant Mortgage Corp., 137 S.Ct. 553, 558 (2017). Rather, the Court
6 found that Fannie Mae's charter "permits suit in any [state or] federal court already 7 endowed with subject-matter jurisdiction over the suit." Id. at 561 (emphasis added).
8 Thus, where removal is based solely on the "sue or be sued" clause in its charter, Fannie
9 Mae fails to establish that a federal district court has jurisdiction in the suit. Id. at 564-65.

10 On January 20, 2017, the Court issued an order to show cause requiring Fannie
11 Mae to show why, after the Supreme Court's decision, the case should not be remanded
12 for lack of jurisdiction. (ECF No. 85.) Fannie Mae responded. (ECF No. 88) For the 13 reasons discussed below, Fannie Mae has failed to provide a basis for federal 14 jurisdiction, and therefore the case will be remanded to the Eighth Judicial District Court.
15 The Court will set aside the order of dismissal under Rule 4(m) for lack of subject matter
16 jurisdiction. (ECF No. 68)

17 II. LEGAL STANDARD

18 Federal courts are courts of limited jurisdiction, having subject-matter jurisdiction
19 only over matters authorized by the Constitution and Congress. U.S. Const. art. III, § 2, 20 cl. 1; e.g., Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 511 U.S. 375, 377 (1994). A suit 21 filed in state court may be removed to federal court if the federal court would have had 22 original jurisdiction over the suit. 28 U.S.C. § 1441(a). However, courts strictly construe 23 the removal statute against removal jurisdiction, and "[f]ederal jurisdiction must be 24 rejected if there is any doubt as to the right of removal in the first instance." Gaus v.
25 Miles, Inc., 980 F.2d 564, 566 (9th Cir. 1992). The party seeking removal bears the 26 burden of establishing federal jurisdiction. Durham v. Lockheed Martin Corp., 445 F.3d
27 1247, 1252 (9th Cir. 2006).

28 ///

1 Federal district courts have “original jurisdiction of all civil actions arising under 2 the . . . laws . . . of the United States.” 28 U.S.C. § 1331. “The presence or absence of 3 federal-question jurisdiction is governed by the ‘well-pleaded complaint rule,’ which 4 provides that federal jurisdiction exists only when a federal question is presented on the 5 face of the plaintiff’s properly pleaded complaint.” Caterpillar Inc. v. Williams, 482 U.S.
6 386, 392, (1987). But “a case may not be removed to federal court on the basis of a
7 federal defense.” Id. at 393.

8 III. ANALYSIS

9 Fannie Mae argues that even after Lightfoot, the Court retains jurisdiction 10 because it had a separate valid justification for removal based on an alternate theory of 11 federal question jurisdiction — namely that it falls under a doctrine unique to cases
12 involving requests for declarative judgment. (ECF No. 88.) Fannie Mae additionally 13 argues that because it identified federal question jurisdiction as its original basis for 14 removal, and because the facts supporting its new theory were available to all of the 15 parties at the time of removal, it can rely on its new theory of jurisdiction even if it did not 16 specifically address it in its petition for removal. (Id.) However, even if the Court accepts
17 Fannie Mae’s procedural and equitable arguments, the new theory it proposes does not 18 support federal question jurisdiction in this case.

19 Generally, federal question jurisdiction turns on the face of the plaintiff’s well-
20 pleaded complaint. See Franchise Tax Bd. of State of Cal. v. Constr. Laborers Vacation
21 Trust for S. Cal., 463 U.S. 1, 9–10 (1983). There is, however, a small wrinkle in this rule
22 in the context of actions for declaratory judgment. As Justice Jackson noted decades
23 ago, suits involving declarative relief often flip the parties’ expected positions. Plaintiffs 24 seeking declaratory judgment are frequently establishing a defense meant to head off
25 another potential related suit. Pub. Serv. Comm’n of Utah v. Wycoff Co., 344 U.S. 237,
26 248 (1952). Therefore, when considering questions of federal question jurisdiction,
27 courts look at both the plaintiff’s complaint and the “character of the threatened action.”
28 Medtronic, Inc. v. Mirowski Family Ventures, LLC, 134 S. Ct. 843, 848 (2014) (quoting

1 Wycoff, 344 U.S. at 248). “That is to say, they ask whether ‘a coercive action’ brought by
2 ‘the declaratory judgment defendant . . . would necessarily present a federal question.’”
3 Id. (quoting Franchise Tax Bd. of State of Cal., 463 U.S. at 19). This pragmatic doctrine
4 balances the unique nature of requests for declaratory judgment with the well-
5 established rule that the Declaratory Judgment Act did not extend federal court
6 jurisdiction beyond its previous bounds.

7 A good example of this doctrine, and indeed a place where it often plays out, is in 8 a suit between a patent holder and an alleged patent infringer. The alleged infringer may 9 file an action seeking a declaratory judgment that she is not violating any patents, or that 10 the patents at issue are invalid. Because a declaratory judgment in this type of case is 11 meant to defend against an eventual claim against the plaintiff for patent infringement, 12 federal courts have consistently recognized jurisdiction on the theory that an 13 infringement suit by the defendant would clearly raise a federal question. See Franchise
14 Tax Bd. of State of Cal., 463 U.S. at 27 n. 19.

15 In this case, Fannie Mae argues that it, like the defendant in Medtronic, are 16 defendants in a declaratory judgment suit who had a viable and related federal claim 17 against the plaintiff. Fannie Mae argues that the obvious action it would have brought in 18 relation to the declaratory relief is “a declaratory judgment claim against LN
19 Management, seeking recognition that the HOA Sale did not extinguish the Deed of 20 Trust.” (ECF No. 88 at 5.) This hypothetical claim, according to Fannie Mae, would have 21 raised a substantial question of federal law based on 12 U.S.C. § 4617(j)(3) — the so
22 called Federal Foreclosure Bar — and therefore supported federal question jurisdiction.
23 (Id.) However, the action Fannie Mae identifies does not fit into the framework described 24 above.

25 The “threatened action” that Fannie Mae identifies is another declaratory claim,
26 rather than “a coercive action.” Medtronic, Inc., 134 S. Ct. at 848. Another quiet title
27 claim, like the one Fannie Mae suggests, does not implicate the same considerations as 28 a coercive action, because the unique nature of a declaratory action — i.e., that is often

1 used to establish a defense to an impending coercive suit — is what triggered the 2 doctrine in the first place. In fact, the doctrine seems to have originally emerged to 3 prevent declaratory judgment plaintiffs from litigating in federal court in order to establish 4 defenses for state court. See Wycoff, 344 U.S. at 248 (“Federal courts will not seize 5 litigations from state courts merely because one, normally a defendant, goes to federal 6 court to begin his federal-law defense before the state court begins the case under state
7 law.”) Indeed, courts have recognized that the distinction between a coercive suit and a
8 declaratory suit is a meaningful one: “In the declaratory-judgment context, whether a 9 federal question exists is determined by reference to a hypothetical non-declaratory suit
10 (i.e., a suit for coercive relief) between the same parties.” Chase Bank USA, N.A. v. City
11 of Cleveland, 695 F.3d 548, 554 (6th Cir. 2012) (emphasis added); see also Koniag, Inc.
12 v. Andrew Airways, Inc., No. 3:13-CV-00051-SLG, 2014 WL 4926344, at *3 (D. Alaska
13 Sept. 30, 2014) (approvingly citing Chase Bank, and determining that declaratory actions
14 are distinct from coercive ones under the Medtronic framework).

15 The face of LN Management’s complaint contains only claims based on state law
16 (ECF No. 1-2), and Fannie Mae has not convincingly shown an exception to the well-
17 pleaded complaint rule. The configuration of this case more closely resembles the 18 “settled law that a case may not be removed . . . on the basis of a federal defense,”
19 Caterpillar, 482 U.S. at 393, than the doctrine described in Medtronic, where a request
20 for declaratory judgment is closely related to a viable coercive claim by the defendant.
21 Therefore, the Court finds that Fannie Mae, who bears the burden of establishing federal 22 jurisdiction, has failed to show cause why the case should not be remanded.

23 IV. CONCLUSION

24 The Court notes that Fannie Mae made several arguments and cited to several 25 cases not discussed above. The Court has reviewed these arguments and cases and 26 determines that they do not warrant discussion as they do not affect the Court’s 27 determination of subject matter jurisdiction.

28 ///

1 It is therefore ordered that this case be remanded consistent with this opinion.
2 Because the Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction, the Court sets aside its April 8, 2016,
3 Order dismissing certain defendants under Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(m) (ECF No. 68). LN
4 Management's motion to set aside order of dismissal (ECF No. 95) is denied as moot.

5 The Clerk is instructed to close this case.

6 DATED this 24th day of April 2017.

7
8

9 MIRANDA DU
10 UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28